

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A backing mirror is presented which mounts to a tow vehicle to facilitate visual alignment of hitch and tongue. Through articulated angular movement, the backing mirror is capable of being repeatably aligned to an appropriate position for visual observation of the coupling of trailer hitch and tongue on a given tow vehicle. An optional second mirror can be employed to facilitate a rearward field of view.